October 1, 2013--For Immediate Release:

CSOSA Supervision of Offenders to Continue During a Federal Shutdown

The Court Services and Offender Supervision Agency (CSOSA) is an independent federal agency responsible for the community supervision of adults on probation, parole and supervised release in the District of Columbia.

CSOSA's supervision and drug testing offices will remain OPEN for business during a Federal Government shutdown.

Individuals on supervision must report for supervision and drug testing appointments. Field and home contacts continue.

Some CSOSA administrative and support organizations will be operating with reduced staff.

For additional information, contact Leonard Sipes at 202-220-5616 (office) or 240-882-8274 (cell).
